

Clinical Pharmacists

pursuing excellence in the use of prescribed medicines

Staff editor

c. £33,000 - £38,000 pa · Ref. PUB-BFE-18 · Central London

BNF publications are widely regarded as the 'gold standard' for information on prescribed medicines. As well as the BNF and BNF for Children, the editorial team is responsible for the Nurse Prescribers' Formulary.

We are looking for a clinical pharmacist who would like:

- a rewarding and stimulating job with supportive colleagues;
- working for the greater good, affecting the health of large numbers of patients;
- the opportunity to influence practise nationally and internationally;
- opportunities to attend professional meetings and conferences.

Benefits include:

- 35-hour week;
- no on-call commitment;
- flexi-time system;
- ability to buy or sell annual leave;
- option for discounted private healthcare;
- subsidised staff restaurant;
- season ticket loan;
- Group Stakeholders pension plan.

Candidates should have:

- a passion for advancing prescribing excellence;
- broad experience in clinical pharmacy, preferably with relevant higher qualifications;
- excellent written and spoken communication skills;
- a good understanding of drug therapy in the UK healthcare environment;
- the self-discipline to meet tight deadlines and contribute to team success;
- the skills and enthusiasm to turn new information into authoritative clinical advice;
- the intellectual rigour and ability to critically appraise information;
- the confidence to be innovative and to take on fresh challenges.

Leading the development of specific publication content for the BNF and BNF for Children, the successful candidate will work alongside highly experienced members of the BNF editorial team to evaluate new and existing evidence and obtain the informed opinion of clinical experts to develop the content of BNF publications. Formal editorial skills are not required but would be advantageous.

Closing date for applications: 12pm, 16 June 2010
